

There is a love that must be held in heart for the God of which the individual is made, the very Life that flows. There is a love to be extended. It is not a love of compromise or agreement with the lower self. It is a love that is steady as a giant tree in the earth that is unmoved with the comings and the goings of the wild animals in the forest. There is a love that shapes your words, your expression, your giving and receiving and sustains your communion with God.

—Beloved Cyclopa and Virginia, October 6, 1990
